European Construction Materials Recycling Congress 2015

Ladies and Gentlemen,

more than 1 billion tons of mineral construction and demolition wastes are produced in Europe a year. This enormous volume of wastes is by far the biggest waste flow produced in Europe. By a quality-secured recycling mineral construction and demolition wastes may be processed to high-quality construction products as intended by urban mining, thus being kept in a cycle. However, the state of construction material recycling varies essentially in the various EU member states though construction material recycling is indispensable for the purposes of avoiding waste and protecting our European landscape areas. That is why EQAR speaks up for a support of construction material recycling and an unrestricted product recognition of quality-secured recycled construction materials. For a long time EQAR has already been demanding uniform European criteria for the end of waste of recycled mineral construction materials. As there is no prospect of European regulations for the end of waste being adopted numerous EU member states have issued own regulations for construction material recycling and the product recognition of recycled construction materials.

At the European Construction Material Recycling Congress of EQAR the present tendencies in European construction material recycling shall be discussed with representatives from the European Parliament, the EU Commission, science and the recycling branch and ways of solution for building up recycling in construction in Europe shall be searched for. In addition the activities of the branch undertaken in the individual member states and innovative solutions for recycling in construction will be presented.

In the framework of this event the European EQAR Award 2015 will be granted. The public event will take place at the factory ground of the company REKO B.V. in Rotterdam on May 8, 2015. During the Recycling Congress it will be possible to visit the largest high-temperature incineration plant for PAC-containing construction wastes.

We look forward to your coming and having an interesting exchange of opinions!
